

Freedom of Information Act 2000 (FOIA)

Decision notice

Date: 14 March 2019

Public Authority: British Broadcasting Corporation (BBC)

Address: Room BC2 A4
Broadcasting Centre
Wood Lane
London W12 7TP

Decision (including any steps ordered)

1. The complainant has requested information from the BBC associated with the journalist John Sweeney. The BBC considers that the requested information is not caught by the FOIA as it is held for the purposes of journalism, art or literature.
2. The Commissioner's decision is that this information is held by the BBC for the purposes of journalism, art or literature and does not fall within the scope of FOIA. She therefore upholds the BBC's position and requires no remedial steps to be taken.

Request and response

3. On 12 January 2019, the complainant wrote to the BBC and requested information in the following terms:

"I want all food and drink expenses data relating to Sweeney and Panorama for the last 5 years, and state what was paid by you and what was not. This should include all receipts, card payment data etc. so we can get a full picture of the spending."

Provide current and recent BBC policy on food and drink expenses for Sweeney and Panorama."

4. The BBC responded on 13 February 2019. It explained that it did not believe that the requested information was caught by the FOIA because it was held for the purposes of 'art, journalism or literature'.

Scope of the case

5. The complainant contacted the Commissioner on 20 February 2019 to complain about the way his request for information had been handled.
6. The Commissioner communicated to the complainant her preliminary assessment of the complaint. She provided him with an example of her formal decision in a different case which also concerned a BBC journalist. She explained to the complainant that she had found the information in that case was derogated and, for the same reason, she considered the information he has requested is derogated. The Commissioner invited the complainant to therefore withdraw his complaint.
7. The complainant did not accept the Commissioner's assessment and preferred to conclude the matter through a decision notice.
8. The Commissioner's investigation has therefore focussed on whether the BBC holds the information the complainant has requested for the purposes of 'journalism, art or literature' and it is therefore excluded from the FOIA.

Reasons for decision

9. Schedule One, Part VI of FOIA provides that the BBC is a public authority for the purposes of FOIA but only has to deal with requests for information in some circumstances. The entry relating to the BBC says:

"The British Broadcasting Corporation, in respect of information held for purposes other than those of journalism, art or literature."
10. This means that the BBC has no obligation to comply with parts I to V of the Act where information is held for 'purposes of journalism, art or literature'. The Commissioner calls this 'the derogation'.
11. The scope of the derogation was considered by the Court of Appeal in the case Sugar v British Broadcasting Corporation and another [2010] EWCA Civ 715, and later, on appeal, by the Supreme Court (Sugar

(Deceased) v British Broadcasting Corporation [2012] UKSC 4). The leading judgment in the Court of Appeal case was made by Lord Neuberger of Abbotsbury MR who stated that:

"..... once it is established that the information sought is held by the BBC for the purposes of journalism, it is effectively exempt from production under FOIA, even if the information is also held by the BBC for other purposes." (paragraph 44), and that "....provided there is a genuine journalistic purpose for which the information is held, it should not be subject to FOIA." (paragraph 46)

12. The Supreme Court endorsed this approach and concluded that if the information is held for the purpose of journalism, art or literature, it is caught by the derogation even if that is not the predominant purpose for holding the information in question.
13. In order to establish whether the information is held for a derogated purpose, the Supreme Court indicated that there should be a sufficiently direct link between at least one of the purposes for which the BBC holds the information (ignoring any negligible purposes) and the fulfilment of one of the derogated purposes. This is the test that the Commissioner will apply.
14. If a sufficiently direct link is established between the purposes for which the BBC holds the information and any of the three derogated purposes – ie journalism, art or literature – it is not subject to FOIA.
15. The Supreme Court said that the Information Tribunal's definition of journalism (in Sugar v Information Commissioner (EA/2005/0032, 29 August 2006)) as comprising three elements, continues to be authoritative.

"1. The first is the collecting or gathering, writing and verifying of materials for publication.

2. The second is editorial. This involves the exercise of judgement on issues such as:

- * the selection, prioritisation and timing of matters for broadcast or publication,*
- * the analysis of, and review of individual programmes,*
- * the provision of context and background to such programmes.*

3. The third element is the maintenance and enhancement of the standards and quality of journalism (particularly with respect to accuracy, balance and completeness). This may involve the training and development of individual journalists, the mentoring of less experienced journalists by more experienced colleagues, professional supervision and guidance, and reviews of the standards and quality of particular areas of programme making."

16. However, the Supreme Court said this definition should be extended to include the act of broadcasting or publishing the relevant material. This extended definition should be adopted when applying the 'direct link test' referred to below. The Supreme Court also explained that 'journalism' primarily means the BBC's 'output on news and current affairs', including sport, and that 'journalism, art or literature' covers the whole of the BBC's output to the public (Lord Walker at paragraph 70). Therefore, in order for the information to be derogated and so fall outside FOIA, there should be a sufficiently direct link between the purpose(s) for which the information is held and the production of the BBC's output and/or the BBC's journalistic or creative activities involved in producing such output.
17. The information requested in this case concerns the expenses of one of the BBC's journalists. As she has found in previous, similar cases (such as FS50694101<sup>1</sup>), the Commissioner is satisfied that this information has a sufficiently direct link to the BBC's output, as expenses are paid in order to produce material for broadcast or publication. This information is therefore held for the purpose of journalism, art or literature; falling squarely within the definition of journalism.
18. The Commissioner finds that this information is held for the purposes of journalism and that the BBC was not obliged to comply with Parts I to V of FOIA. As a result the Commissioner is satisfied that, in this case, she has no jurisdiction in this matter and therefore no statutory power to order disclosure.
