EXPLANATORY NOTE

(This note is not part of the Order)

This Order amends the Falkland Islands Courts (Overseas Jurisdiction) Order 1989 (S.I. 1989/2399) (“the 1989 Order”) to allow proceedings to be commenced by way of an information before the courts of the Falkland Islands where a person commits an offence or is suspected of committing an offence under the law of South Georgia and South Sandwich Islands or the British Antarctic Territory (“the Territories”), whether that person is in one of the Territories or in the Falkland Islands.

Whilst it is possible to commence proceedings by information against a person in regard to an offence under the law of one of the Territories in the Falkland Islands Courts, under the 1989 Order as originally enacted this was only possible when the person was in the Falkland Islands. There was no provision to allow proceedings to be commenced in the Falkland Islands Courts in relation to a person who was in one of the Territories. This amendment to the 1989 Order ensures that in the event an individual is suspected of committing a criminal offence in one of the Territories, an information can be laid against them for that offence whilst they are in that Territory.
